

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

18 May 1955

Dear [redacted]

I had been hoping to hear from you in connection with the most interesting piece of information I learned from you when I visited the Burnetts at their nice home last March. I have the impression that you were going to get me something from your old Singapore associate who now lives at one of the Service Clubs in London and who might add something to your recollection. Also, you yourself, I thought, were going to write me something, and, I had hoped, too, that possibly you could get [redacted] to do the same. You know, perhaps, that I didn't get a chance to talk with Arthur, because he was ill during the time of my visit. Anything that you could let me have with propriety and without going to too much trouble would be very greatly appreciated.

I am at home now, convalescing from my illness, and it will be at least a couple more weeks yet before I can go back to the office, initially, of course, for light duty.

With cordial greetings to all the [redacted] I am,

Sincerely,

WILLIAM F. FRIEDMAN
