entirely cities to be evacuated

Soviet H-Bomb Claim Changes U. S. Civil Defense Policy

Dr. Lapp, a noted nuclear physicist, was formerly a high official in the Government's atomic bomb project. This is the latest of a series of reports on the Soviet H-bomb announcement.

By Ralph E. Lapp

Makenko's claim that the Soviets have produced a drastic change in policy in United States civil defense is severely questioned by the fact that military defense targets and the United Nations have not changed. Some experts claim that the Soviets have not been able to go public with their atomic weapons.

The policy crisis in the United States is based on the idea that an H-bomb is an equivalent of more big A-bombs. Though there are some big A-bombs, the Soviets have not been able to develop an H-bomb that is equal to the United States biggest atomic bomb, the H-bomb has not been publicized in the press. Hence, the United States has not been able to get off the ground.

A few days ago, the United States, in response to the Soviet H-bomb
announcement, announced
that it would move to full civil defense. This is the first time that the United States has attempted to mobilize its entire population for civil defense.

The United States
has not yet had the time
to mobilize its entire
population for civil
defense. However, the
United States has been
able to mobilize some
of its population for
civil defense. The United States has not
yet had the time
to mobilize its entire
population for
military defense.

A few days ago, the
United States, in response
to the Soviet H-bomb
announcement, announced
that it would move to full
civil defense. This is the first
time that the United States
has attempted to mobilize
its entire population for
civil defense. The
United States has not
yet had the time
to mobilize its entire
population for
military defense.

The United States
has not yet had the time
to mobilize its entire
population for civil
defense. However, the
United States has been
able to mobilize some
of its population for
civil defense. The
United States has not
yet had the time
to mobilize its entire
population for
military defense.