Foreign Affairs—Before the House Appropriations sub-committee on the State Department, Secretary Hull testified that America's "vital interests are being threatened in a number of places and to an increasingly alarming degree." So far as the printed record is concerned, Mr. Hull made no explanation of this conclusion. However, it is known that what he had in mind is the danger of war in Europe, which would gravely affect the United States, German and Italian diplomatic and propaganda activity in South America, and Japanese operations in China.

* * *

The Far East took first place in interest during the week as a result of Japanese occupation of the International Settlement at Amoy, undoubtedly intended as a precedent for like action and control of the International Settlement at Shanghai. Immediately following the Japanese operation, the Marblehead and Hulmer landed detachments, and British and French warships present followed suit. Simultaneously, the United States sent a strong note to Japan rejecting suggestions from that Government for the revision of the Land Regulations and improvement of the administrative machinery of the Shanghai Settlement. The abnormal conditions at Shanghai, in the view of our Government, totally lack a basis for a discussion looking toward an orderly settlement of the complicated problems involved. It is appreciated that the international settlements in China, particularly that at Shanghai, present opportunities for inflaming relations between Japan and the western states, but their importance for trading purposes is such that those states are determined to maintain the rights in connection with them which they now possess.
Foreign Affairs—Before the House Appropriations sub-committee on the State Department, Secretary Hull testified that America's "vital interests are being threatened in a number of places and to an increasingly alarming degree." So far as the printed record is concerned, Mr. Hull made no explanation of this conclusion. However, it is known that what he had in mind is the danger of war in Europe, which would gravely affect the United States, German and Italian diplomatic and propaganda activity in South America, and Japanese operations in China.

* * * * * * *

The Far East took first place in interest during the week as a result of Japanese occupation of the International Settlement at Amoy, undoubtedly intended as a precedent for like action and control of the International Settlement at Shanghai. Immediately following the Japanese operation, the Marblehead and Huilier landed detachments, and British and French warships present followed suit. Simultaneously, the United States sent a strong note to Japan rejecting suggestions from that Government for the revision of the Land Regulations and improvement of the administrative machinery of the Shanghai Settlement. The abnormal conditions at Shanghai, in the view of our Government, totally lack a basis for a discussion looking toward an orderly settlement of the complicated problems involved. It is appreciated that the international settlements in China, particularly that at Shanghai, present opportunities for inflaming relations between Japan and the western states, but their importance for trading purposes is such that those states are determined to maintain the rights in connection with them which they now possess.