(U) HISTORY TODAY - FRIDAY CLASSIC: December 11, 2015

FROM: CCH

Run Date(s): 12/11/2015

(U) Every Friday, the Center for Cryptologic History republishes a favorite History Today from our 12-year archives. We invite our readers to send suggestions for favorite articles you'd like to see reprised.

(U) One of the more popular features within the feature is our Trivia Challenge, published once or twice a month. Every time we publish a Trivia question, we get a lot of people submitting their answers, or, often, asking us to tell them the answer early. Our policy, steadfast through the years, has been NOT to reveal the answer in advance, even when a reader's suggested answer is correct.

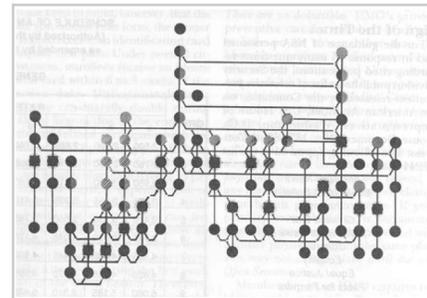

(U) Today's classic, from 2005, proved to be one of the tougher and, for a couple of people, controversial items.

(U) Good news: You won't have to wait until tomorrow or until the weekend passes to get the answer. After you've thought the question over, guess, and click here for the answer.

(U) HISTORY TODAY – May 5, 2005

(U) HISTORY'S TRIVIA: The editor of the NSA Newsletter in 1992 found the design (reproduced here) in a 1956 Newsletter and republished it. The 1992 editor wondered in print if this were a Milleporous ooflop. Well, it turned out it wasn't. If not that, then, what was it?

(U) Trivia Question HISTORY TODAY - FRIDAY CLASSIC: Historic graphic - from NSA Newsletter 1956. A 1992 NSA newsletter editor asked if this is a Milleporous ooflop? In the answer: one of the dots "is YOU."

(U) ANSWER TOMORROW. (in the above link!)
