Doc ID CASE#	ORIGINATION DATE	REQUESTER NAME	REQUEST SUBJECT	DISPOSITION
44816	12-Jan-2005	Giles Slade	In June 1981, President Francois Mitterand of France provided President Reagan with evidence of prolonged Soviet policy to steal technology from the West and especially from the United States of America, evidence provided by KGB Colonel, Vladimir I. Vetrov. Vetrov provided names of KGB, Directorate T (Line X) officers in the West who were busy stealing technologies and a list shopping list of what technologies the Soviets were looking for. In December 1981 Gus W. Weiss, an NSC member, presented a plan to CIA Director William Casey to allow the Sovs to steal technology for the Urengoi 6 natural gas pipeline, but alter what they stole so it would fail. President Reagan gave approval in January 1982, Casey, the CIA, the Department of Defense and the FBI put Weiss's plan into effect. Computer chips and psudosoftware were passed off on KGB acquisition teams as was some Canadian software designed to control pipeline pressures, buried in this software was a trojan horse that caused, in 1983, an explosion and fire seen from space; Award by the NSA of a "cipher disk" to Gus W. Weiss; Transcripts of the debriefings of KGB Colonel (Fifth Directorate, Department K) Colonel Vitaly Sergeevich Yurchenko, Vetrov's interrogator and last person to see him alive.	Admin Closure
