Dear Bart:

This will be a short note to tell you of my safe arrival home after a very pleasant TWA trans-Atlantic flight.

I was, however, much disappointed in the fact that my stuff from Seffridge's was not aboard the plane. I was more than disappointed, in fact quite annoyed, because I went to the trouble of making a special visit to the Export Department at Seffridge's the day before I took off, to assure myself that they had everything laid on properly. They said they had.

I have initiated a tracer from this end with the TWA people and now am writing to ask if you would be good enough to have somebody to go over to Seffridge's and start a tracer from that end on Export Card Number B 44567. The package contained one overcoat, one sports jacket, three cardigans and four pairs of argyle socks; total value approximately $200.

If it was Seffridge's fault that the stuff was not put aboard, I shall expect them to bear the cost of shipment by air direct to me at my home address which I quoted above. I shall be able to get the stuff through U.S. customs OK because I declared it on my form on arrival, for later delivery.

I have already received from Zug a receipt for the $10 I paid for changing my air travel ticket from tourist to 1st class. If you need it, let me know and I'll send it to you.

Please let me thank you for the many courtesies that you and your assistants showed me while I was in London.

Sincerely,
