Dear Sam:

On 15 February 1955, in a conference between Lieutenant General Canine, Director of the National Security Agency, and Mr. John C. McPherson, Chairman of the NSA Scientific Advisory Board, it was agreed that it would be advisable to have a meeting of the Board this spring to discuss one or two important problems which General Canine wishes to place before the Board.

The dates 6 and 7 April are considered most suitable for the meeting, leaving the date 8 April open for members who can spare time to consult individually with Agency personnel.

I hope you will find yourself in position to attend the Board meeting and promptly upon receipt of affirmative information, I will have the Chief of the NSA Registry for Consultants (NSARC) make whatever arrangements may be necessary. If you have any preference as to the mode of travel other than that previously submitted by you to the Chief NSARC, please let me know.

Sincerely,
