In compliance with your message of 1 May^a I have collected the following information regarding the organization of Portugal's^b divisional intelligence:

The divisional intelligence branch is composed of high ranking staff officers who have received special training.

The staff officers' post is divided into 3 units under the Intelligence Head:

(1) A secret intelligence unit consists of 4 staff members, together with several secretaries and map-drafters.

1 staff officer has special control of secret military maps.

1 staff officer has special control of intelligence and is directly responsible to the Intelligence Head.

The other staff officer (?investigates?)

--lg--.

(2) The entire intelligence organization requires 4 staff officers together with several secretaries and map-drafters.

The 1st staff officer has special control of military geographical (?post war?) map-drafting, or secret military maps, etc.

The 2nd Staff officer is responsible for comprehensive intelligence --1G-- surveys, and reports to the Intelligence Head.

The 3rd staff office prepares drafts for military headquarters intelligence reports, compiles army corps battle --1U--, and staff intelligence dispatches.

The 4th staff officer investigates enemy (?military?) and prisoner (?records?).

(3) The Communications and Liaison Command is organized as follows:

A. All divisions and all the special type army corps which are concerned with communications and liaison are, as a rule, divided into:

(?Tank corps?)
--1G-- light cavalry
Bicycles
Airplane --1G--
(?Motorized?) --1G--

B. These 5 branches are under the Intelligence Head's --1U--.

Other special type army corps are under a (?lower?) command.

B. Experts, other divisional intelligence departments --1G--, and liaison --2U/G-- are concerned with outside personnel, with releasing news to the press, --1U-- divisional departments, and setting the dates for intelligence conferences.
