Dear Mr. Vieira:

I appreciate your taking the trouble to express your concern with what you read about the National Security Agency and the George C. Marshall Research Library. Unfortunately, newspapers are not always able to place events in context. Your description of our actions suggests considerable misunderstanding. Your fears are unfounded. I have attached a copy of my reply to a similiar concern by Congressman Smith of Oregon. It will provide you a better understanding of our visit and relationship with the Marshall Library.

Sincerely,

M/R: This letter was drafted by the Director. Q4 suggested that it cover a copy of our response to SSCI. The Director concurred in this approach. The letter to the SSCI has not been drafted. We recommend, in the interest of not delaying this response, that the Director's letter to Congressman Smith be substituted instead.

The Honorable Robert F. Smith

Washington, DC 20515

Dear Congressman Smith:

Reference is made to your letter of May 19, 1983, addressed to the Office of Legislative Liaison, Department of Defense, and enclosing a May 6, 1983 letter from a constituent, Ann Kelly. Your letter has been referred to this Agency for appropriate response.

The article from the April 29, 1983 issue of The Oregonian enclosed with the letter from your constituent did not, in our view, contain a complete description of the visit by representatives of this Agency to the Marshall Library.

The Marshall Library has a government-authorized secure-storage facility and government-approved security clearances for archivists to permit the Library to hold classified and other sensitive government-originated information contained in the collections entrusted to it. The Library holds the collections of two former National Security Agency (NSA) officials; former Director of NSA, LTG Marshall S. Carter (also current President of the Marshall Foundation, the parent body of the Library), and William F. Friedman, a former senior cryptologist at NSA. Both of these collections contain some information which is classified or protected from disclosure by various statutes.

The NSA and the Marshall Library have had a long and mutually beneficial working relationship which has involved, inter alia, the declassification of much information contained in the Friedman Collection as well as providing the Library related historical material and the loan of certain government-owned equipment.

The visit at issue was made because it appeared from a recently published book that certain material that was supposed to be closed to the public had been exposed without formal authorization by the U.S. Government or the Library.

The NSA representatives advised the Library regarding the status of some properly classified information and of certain information which is protected by statute.

Serial: N0789

The goal of the Agency and of the Library is to make the maximum amount of historical material available to the public for historical research while at the same time protecting valid national security-related information as required by law.

Sincerely,

LINCOLN D. FAURER
