NSA REGULATION NO. 10-30

12 July 1954

SECTION III - DEFINITIONS

1. Consultant. One who serves in an advisory capacity to the Agency as distinguished from one who serves as an officer or employee in the performance of operational or administrative duties. He expresses his views or gives his opinions regarding problems or questions presented to him by the Agency, but he does not perform, or supervise the performance of, operational or administrative functions. Ordinarily, he will be an expert in the particular field in which he advises. However, he need not be a specialist, his "expertness" may consist in his possession of broad administrative, professional or technical experience of a high order which indicates that his ability and knowledge will render his advice of distinct value to the Agency. The services of a consultant are such that they cannot be performed by a regular employee or obtained on any other basis.

2. Expert. An employee who performs regular services of a highly technical or administrative nature essential to the accomplishment of certain specialized functions. An expert normally will perform duties such as developing and putting into effect solutions of operating problems of a highly technical nature, supervising the execution of highly technical functions, conducting responsible activities which are an integral part of operating procedures, and making operational decisions as a specialist in a highly technical field of knowledge. Though his service normally is intermittent, an expert may have continuing operational responsibilities during each period of actual duty, since his primary function is to carry out specialized operations for which training and experience qualify him. The services of an expert are such that they cannot be performed by a regular employee or obtained on any other basis.

3. Advisor. For purposes of this Regulation, a consultant or expert who does not have the status of an employee.

4. Procurement.

a. Appointment (Personal Services). Personal services of consultants and experts may be obtained by appointment on a Standard Form 50 (Notification of Personnel Action), by the Personnel Division under Section 7 of NSA CPM Chapter A2. Such services are chargeable to the personnel ceiling.

b. Contract for Personal Services. Personal services of a highly skilled person or persons may also be obtained by "contract for Personal Services", negotiated by the Chief, NSA Procurement Office (SIGPO) under the Armed Services Procurement Regulations and the Army Procurement Procedures. However, a confirmatory SF 50 must be issued by the Personnel Division for distribution to the Civil Service Commission. Such services are chargeable to the personnel ceiling.

c. Contract for Non-personal Services. The services of an individual, corporation or firm may be obtained on a lump-sum or fee basis by a "Contract for Non-Personal Services" negotiated by SIGPO. This, however, involves the furnishing of an end product such as a finished report or the services of an educational institution (a university, college, business school, or public or private vocational school), laboratory, or industrial organization for the training and instruction of civilian or military employees. These "non-personal" services are not chargeable to the personnel ceiling, and are not within the scope of this Regulation.

d. Invitational Travel Orders. Orders requested of the NSA Adjutant General for persons not having an employment status with the Federal Government, whose consultative, advisory or other highly specialized technical services are required in a capacity which is directly related to or in connection with activities of the Agency. Since these persons are not employees, their services are not chargeable to the personnel ceiling.

e. Conflicts of Interest. Situations where the personal interests of an individual serving the Government may, because of the individual's non-Governmental activities or connections, be inconsistent with the interests of the Government in relation to a matter dealt with by the individual in his Governmental capacity. Employment of such individuals is prohibited by statute.
